URIEL SEBREE.

URIEL SEBREE, Lieut, U. S. N., Light-House Inspector,

Imperial Pekin Duck Eggs: $1.50 PER DOZEN. FOR SALE BY D. J. INGALIS, Chadwell, "Dun Gone."

"I reckon he's dun bin called fur, sah," said the old man as he came around to the grocery.

"Somebody dying?" asked a man who was passing.
"Yes, sah."

"Who is it?" "Jupiter, sah—my dog Jupiter.
Mebbe ye wouldn't mind gwine aroun' dar wid me? It's lonely like to be wid anybody dyin'."
The old man's voice proved that he was deeply moved, and the ped-estrian went with him. Around the corner and a half a block up the street they turned into a yard, and there lay the old dog on the grass. eyes half closed and breathing heavily.

"He's moas' gone—moas' gone!"
whispered the old man as he knelt on the ground and softly smoothed the body.
"What's the matter?"

"Ole aige, sah—nuffin but ole aige. He's bin givin' out dis last y'ar, but I didn't reckon it would come quite "How long have you had him?"
"Dat's—dat's what makes it hurt me so! I rized him up since de time he wasn't bigger'n my fist. It's gwine on twenty y'ars since dis dog stepped foot in my cabin. Jupiter, does ye hear ole marse talkin' to ye Does ye know Ize right yere beside

"Twenty years is a long time," said the pedestrian.

"Yes, a long, long time," whis-pered the old man. "An' dis'ere Jupiter has mixed in wid all my joys an' sorrows-all my good luck an' bad. He's seen de time when he had plenty, an' he's seen de time when we had neither food nor fiah. Jupiter, open your eyes once an' look at me! Ize right yere! I wouldn't leave ye fur all de gold in de hull world!"

"How does your wife take it?" asked the visitor.

"Deed, sah, but-but-!" The old man broke down at that, tears raining down his cheeks and his throat filling up, and it was a long minute before he resumed : -She's dead! Died five y'ars ago Jupiter an' me was all alone in de house wid her when she closed her eyes. I sot dar a-holdin' of her hands an' singin':-

"She's gwine up to Heaben in a chariot— She's gwine to jine de hand; De bells am a ringing fur to call her, She's a gwine to dat better land."

"An' dis Jupiter sot dar an knowed dat she was dyin' jist as well as Idid, and he mourned, an' couldn't be comforted. It war days an' days befo' he would cat a mouful, an' many a night as we sot in de darkness, a step on de sidewalk soundin' like old Sue's would make him spring up an' bark fur joy. He's been jist like relashuns to me since dat." "It's too bad!"

"Y-yes. I'd gi'n all I have in de world to keep him alive a y'ar longer. Jupiter, it's me—ole marse! Doan' h'ar me talkin' to ye?'

"Have you always lived here?" asked the man, striving to divert the other's attention.
"No, sah, an' dat's another reason why I can't keep de tears back. Do you know dat I mar'd Sue down in Georgia in de ole slave days? Jist befo' de wa' she was sold away from me, an' I nebber'spected to see her no mo'. Arter de wa' I lived in Rich-mond, an' one day somebody tole me dat my Sue was in Detroit. I didn't wait to airn money-I didn't wait to write to her, but dat same night I sot out afoot, Jupiter wid me. It was weeks an' weeks afo' we got yere. We went hungry an' thirsty. We lay down at night all tired out, an' we got up in de mawnin' wid all our bones achin'. Some helped us an' some cursed us, an' we got yere at last an' found my Sue. Sich rejoicin' an' cryin' an' prayin'! An' Jupiter seemed to understan' all about it, kase I'd told him de hull story ober an' ober ag'in as we tramped long de highways." "He is dead!" whispered the man.

"Am he gone? Fo' de Lawd! he am! Jupiter! Jupiter!"
"I will help you bury him if you will get a spade."
"Thanks," answered the old man when he could choke down his feel-"No hand but mine must bury dat ole dog. He got ter be laid in tenderly. Ize got to lay him in de grave an mourn ober him myself. Ize obleeged to you—you may go."
And as the man passed out of the gate "Ole Marse" knelt beside the body again and sobbed out:—

"Dun gone away from me, an' de ole man am left to watch in de dark-ness alone!"—[Detroit Free Press.
